

Upper Mustang Trek

Trip Overview

Upper Mustang, also known as Lo Mustang, resides in Northern Nepal at the end of the Kali Gandaki River. Upper Mustang is a remote area that has its part in the Annapurna Conservation Area. The trek involves a high altitude as the upper Mustang gains an elevation of around 3,840 meters. The Upper Mustang Trek is a 14-day-long trek to explore the hidden world of the ancient Buddhist kingdom of Nepal, which has been protected from the world because of its difficult topography.

This region offers the virgin beauty of landscapes and a tranquil Himalayan range, along with captive and arid plateaus, ravishing cliffs, and plunging canyons. Besides its natural richness, one cannot miss the cultural significance of this region, which is intertwined with the heritage of the Tibetan ranges. The traditional Buddhist lifestyle, along with the ancient monasteries, beautiful attire and costumes, a delicacy of Tibetan and Himalayan cuisines with religious practices, fluttering prayer flags, and whitewashed houses, are some of the central attractions of this place.

Mustang is the perfect combination of cultural and natural beauty, which makes it a perfect spot for trekking. Away from the hustle and bustle of the busy city life, Mustang is a spot for absolute tranquility and peace. As you pass through the white snow-capped Annapurna and Dhaulagiri, you will be able to immerse yourself in the soothing sound of Kali Gandaki and the chirping of birds.

The Upper Mustang region is a paradise for photographers and explorers who are on a mission to explore this enchanting realm. It is not only a physical trip; it is more of a journey of self-discovery and connecting oneself with one's soul. The trek demands resilience, a challenging attitude, and a spirit for adventure. So are you ready to embark on a journey to discover the hidden secrets of Mini Tibet through dramatic landscapes and breathtaking views nestled in the heart of the Himalayas?
